Solution of PAK301 GDB 2024

Donald Trump's victory in the U.S. elections could significantly impact Pakistan-U.S. relations. During his first term, Trump's approach to Pakistan was transactional, focusing on the country's role in the Afghan peace process. This led to a reset in relations, with Pakistan cooperating closely with the U.S. on Afghanistan and making efforts to crack down on terrorist groups.

Some potential implications of Trump's re-election on Pakistan-U.S. relations include:

- Continued Cooperation on Afghanistan: Trump's administration may continue to work with Pakistan to facilitate the Afghan peace process.
- Economic Ties: Trump promised to boost trade ties with Pakistan, but progress has been slow due to regulatory barriers and intellectual property concerns.

Security Assistance: The U.S. may continue to use economic tools, like the Financial Action Task Force (FATF), to encourage Pakistan to take action against militant groups.
